

UNLUCKY IN LOVE, MAN, 65, ENDS LIFE

HAGERSTOWN, Md., May 24.—After practically the entire population of Brownsville and vicinity had engaged in a search lasting nearly a week for Eugene A. Brown, aged sixty-five, a former well-known school teacher, who held a Government position in Washington, his body was found about 8 o'clock yesterday evening in a remote part of the mountain near the village by two neighbors, Henry and Clarence Ickan. Brown, who had evidently committed suicide had been dead for several days. Beside the body lay a revolver with one cartridge discharged, a safety razor blade with which he had inflicted deep wounds on his legs, and two bottles, supposed to have contained poison, which it is believed he swallowed. There was a bullet hole in his temple.

Before leaving the Harrison residence at Brownsville, where he had been visiting, Brown wrote a letter to a friend in Hagerstown stating that he intended to "hang it all," asserting that he was disappointed in love and the "hypothetical hell of Dante's imagination could not be worse than the torment I am suffering."

CONGRESSMEN START WAR UPON BOLSHEVISTS

Two members of the House yesterday started a drive against radical aliens and alien slackers in the world war. Congressman Johnson of Washington declared that there are too many people in the country preaching the doctrine of revolution.

"If they are not citizens of the United States, they must be sent out at once," he said. "If they are citizens, they should be put in jail."

Congressman Emerson of Ohio endorsed this move and demanded early legislation which would place a check on molcontents.

HURT WHEN CYCLE HITS STREET CAR

Thrown from the motorcycle he was riding when it collided with a street car of the Washington Railway and Electric Company at Eleventh and G streets northwest, yesterday, James E. Williams, 619 W street northwest, was taken to the Emergency Hospital suffering from slight injuries.

An automobile of the Postoffice Department, operated by James L. Alderton, 3827 Georgia avenue northwest, collided with a steam shovel on Georgia avenue near Farragut street northwest, yesterday. The automobile was slightly damaged.

The automobile of Roger LaHayne, 1300 D street northeast, collided with a street car of the Capital Traction Company at Eighth street and Pennsylvania avenue southeast, last night. The automobile was not damaged.

TO CONTINUE WAR ON WILD DRIVERS

Major Raymond W. Pullman, Superintendent of Police, today instructed the members of his command to continue to work to check reckless driving and prevent accidents.

"Most collisions are caused by reckless driving across street intersections," Major Pullman said. "See that all drivers slow up at street intersections and always observe the vehicle-to-the-right-having-the-right-of-way rule."

"Warn drivers against thoughtlessness and carelessness."

DRYS MAY SPLIT ON ENFORCEMENT

"Drys" are taking no chances with bootleggers. Their bill provides against carrying liquors by "aircraft" as well as by boat, wagon, autos, and railroad.

"Drys" threaten to split over methods of enforcing prohibition, according to indications today.

Congressman Randall, only prohibition party man in Congress, said he would oppose creation of a prohibition commissioner under the Treasury Department as proposed in the Sheppard bill.

Randall, among others, is against creating new jobs and wants the Department of Justice to enforce the law. Sheppard's bill would appropriate $3,500,000 for the prohibition commissioner, who would be empowered to appoint hundreds of agents to trace down violations and prosecute them.

Another difference is cropping up over the maximum alcoholic content to be permitted in beverages.

Senator Jones (Washington) would make one-half of one per cent the deadline. Senator Sheppard's bill would make the chemical trace of alcohol sufficient to bar.

House "drys" today were leaning toward the Republican provision. They desire a definite line of demarcation, over which there can be no quibble. The maximum percentage of alcohol allowed by the Jones bill, they say, is so low as to exclude all the "near beers" which are intoxicants in disguise.

Meantime, the decision of Federal Judge Mayer in New York, that brewing of beer containing 2 1/2 per cent alcohol could continue until the courts passed on the case, only increased demands of the "drys" today, for action on enforcement measures.

The Department of Justice, having done nothing to prosecute those brewing such beer to date, indicated it would not change its course following Judge Mayer's ruling. Its agents, however, are continuing to gather data.

"Wets" and "drys," and moderates alike, failed today to discover any "leaks" under the enforcement bills. Even patent medicines, which are consumed as beverages in dry territory, gets a death blow from the pending bills.

They can be sold only on prescriptions written by physicians under strict permit from the prohibition commissioner. The physician promises under oath to make a thorough examination before prescribing medicines containing alcohol.

Medicines which contain alcohol but are "nonpotable"—unfit for drinking—are not affected by the bill.

Senator Jones, however, took precaution to provide in his bill that the prohibition commissioner shall be the judge of whether medicine or other preparations containing alcohol are potable and therefore require permits.

Prohibition agents are authorized by the bill to apprehend violators, and, with consent of the court, to prosecute the case.

The bootlegger comes in for a new definition. The bill says: "Any person who shall, by himself or his employes, servant, agent, or himself or any other person, company or corporation, keep or carry around in his person or in a vehicle, or leave in a place for another, any intoxicating liquor as herein defined, sell or dispose of the same by gift or otherwise, or who shall in any manner directly or indirectly solicit, take or accept any order for the sale, shipment, or delivery of intoxicating liquor in violation of law, shall be termed a 'bootlegger.'"

And the now popular query: "Have you a little still in your house?" may become a dangerous question. The bill makes it unlawful for any person to directly or indirectly manufacture, sell, transport, export, receive, deliver, barter, solicit, or take orders for, give away, furnish or possess liquors or apparatus for making them.

Exceptions are made to bona fide liquor purchases before the act is effective.

Senate debate on the league of nations promises the most bitter partisan fight staged in the upper house in years.

Democrats are preparing a series of speeches to counter Republican attacks. Early next week Senator Robinson, Arkansas, will begin the Democratic campaign to stir up public sentiment which, Democrats hope, will force hostile Senators to vote for the league covenant.

Debate on the peace treaty and the league will be resumed Monday. Senator Hiram Johnson's resolution calling for immediate presentation of the full text of the treaty to the Senate in the unfinished business, and will come up each day until it has been disposed of, either by a direct vote or by being sent to the Foreign Relations Committee.

The expected test of strength between Republicans and Administration forces, imminent yesterday over this failed to develop. It will come, however, when Senator Hitchcock next week renews his motion that Johnson's resolution be sent to committee.

In addition to the discussion of Johnson's resolution, which is expected to cover every phase of the peace-making, Senator Reed has announced he will speak Monday on the league. Senator Robinson, following him, Johnson is preparing a speech on the league—his first—to be delivered within a few days.

And by Senator Lodge that he will apply "plain, if not pitiless publicity" to Senate consideration of the treaty was stated today to be positive assurance that much of the discussion will be in open session, for the first time in the history of treaty making in this country.

Due publicity, Republican leaders say, will provide justification for their demands for amendment of the league covenant.

While the Senate today took a week's rest, the House continued consideration of the Indian appropriation bill.

The Republican committee states are now virtually complete. It is stated that they will show that Senators Penrose and Warren have won their fight against Progressive opposition to being chairmen, respectively, of the Finance and Appropriation committees.
